ABOUT THE SYMPOSIUM

Emerging microbial infections, antimicrobial resistance, and virus-associated cancers represent some of the most pressing challenges in modern medicine. As pathogens continue to evolve and cross species barriers, healthcare systems must respond to an increasingly complex global threat shaped by urbanization, climate change, and unprecedented human mobility. Infectious diseases and virology occupy a critical space between clinical practice and molecular science. Beyond acute infections, viruses are now recognized as key contributors to chronic disease and oncogenesis, highlighting the importance of integrating viral oncology into contemporary medical care.

SiDV-2026 brings together leading national and international experts to explore the evolving landscape of microbial infections, focusing on pathogenesis, emerging variants, and evidence-based clinical protocols. The symposium provides a comprehensive forum for clinicians, researchers, and health professionals to translate innovation into effective patient care.
